SOUTH FEARS NO RIVAL IN MARKET

Now Has and Will Always Have Monopoly of Cotton Industry, Says Jordan.

BIG MEETING IN KNOXVILLE

Manufacturers From All Over United States Are in Attendance.

(By Associated Press.)
KNOXVILLE, TENN., May 10.-With all parts of the United States, the ninth annual session of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association began this morning in the Woman's Building with President R. S. Rinehardt, or Lincolnton. es on all manufacturing plants loose in a chorus of noise that of lindustry's salute to the city's . Addresses of welcome were deby Governor John I. Cox and W. H. Gass, for the State and city etitively, and by W. B. Lockett, for pusiness interests. Mayor Gass pre-d the convention with a magnificent rair, being a set of keys carved from essee marble and inclosed in a case of native materials—cotton, wool, and timber. Governor Cox's appear-on the stage was greeted with ap-ite.

Ethalf of the commercial bodies, by W. B. Lockett, Arthur H. Lowe, of Fitchburg, Mass., made a plensing response.

Technical education in the South was discussed by Dr. Brown Ayers, president of the University of Tennessee, and his remarks struck a responsive chord in the convention. The hope of stopping the export of raw cotton from the South and the turning of the South's energy to its manufactures he held depended largely on the technical training of the young people of the South. He wanted this section to quit talking so much about its resources and more about how it can ection to quit talking so much about tow it, can to these resources into products, out them on the market. A few and dollars placed himong instiss attempting this work would do Only three Southern States have anything definite in technical trans-

The souvenir menu, an exquisite piece of york in design and arrangement, was gotten out under the immediate direction of lir. Heth Lorton, who has been a leading factor in the entertainments given by the Virginia hosts to their distinguished visitors.

The menu card was tied with a blue and white silk cord, and the cover ornamented with a reproduction of the order of the society in relief, supended from a blue and white ribbon, above an inscription as to the time and place of the triennia, meeting.

Within the covers, the leaves displaying the menu, the musical programme, the toats, the names of the general officers, standing committee, delegates and alternates, were interspersed with a series of rare and heautiful historic engravings, collected with great care and pains by Mr. Lotton, and showing General George Washington in 1775 at the period of his taking command of the Continental army; Major-General Baron de Steuben and staff; Washington taking command of the Continental army; Major-General Baron de Steuben and staff; Washington taking command of the Continental army; Major-General Baron de Steuben and staff; Washington taking command of the Continental army; Major-General Baron de Steuben and staff; Washington taking command of the Continental army; Major-General Baron de Steuben and staff; Washington's farewell to his officers at Fraunces' Tavern, December 4th, 1783.

ceeding than it has yet possessed, extentially so far as the public is concerned.

A Cause Celebre.

The nature of the proceedings in this city are not very clearly made known in the long story involved in this cause celebre. Argument was had yesterday in the Chancery Court on a motion of the plaintiff by counsel to fix the costs claimed to have been illegally incurred by the plaintiff in certain depositions, recently taken in Washington. At that hearing numerous letters and decuments relevant or irrelevant, were identified by witnesses and initialed, and in some cases read and made a part of the voluminous record, in the cross-examination of Attorney Yarrell, representing the plaintiff. The ruling of Judge Grinnan was, in effect, that when letters or documents were read into the deposition, the cost thereby incurred should be paid by the party requiring this to be done. Attorney Yarrell, on cross-examination in Washington recently, had caused some one hundred and sixty pages to be thus incorporated into his client's deposition. Judge Grinnan directed that a decree be prepared referring the depositions to a commissioner in chancery to ascertain the relative proportion of the costs involved, to be paid by the respective parties to the suit.

This ended the court proceedings, and after luncheon the Baroness and Mrs. Maybrick, their course, Hayden and Yarrell, Mr. D. W. Armstrong, defendant in the case, and his attorney, Mr. Philip B. Shield, of this city, and Mr. Mark Lloyd, notary, assembled in the office of Major Cutchins and there spent the afternoon in the taking of depositions. The hearing was adjourned about 6:30 P. M. until to-day. Judge Yarrell, defendent in the adjournment was had.

Judge Yarrell's deposition will be concluded to-day, and it is expected that the Baroness von Roques will then take the stand, although there is no official announcement of this. The testimony of this interesting cosmopolite and chief litigant in the cause will be the most interesting feature of the entire proceeding.

An Old Suit.

An Old Suit.

The suit in which depositions are now being taken is a chancery cause, instituted in the Chancery Court of this city in 1893, the style of the cause being Caroline E. von Roques vs. D. W. Armstrong et als. The firm of Hayden & Yarrel are counsel for the plaintiff, and Mr. Phil. B. Shield, of this city, is counsel for the defendants. The purpose of the suit is to recover certain lands in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky, about 2,560,000 acres in area, covered by various other patents in the State of Virginia. Much of the property is valuable, having mineral deposits and timber thereon. A large proportion of it is ocupied by squatters or those acquiring uable, having mineral aeposta thereon. A large proportion of it is occupied by squatters or those acquiring by adverse possession or by purchase. Madame von Roques claims, through what is known as the Nolbrook title, and the suit was brought to recover money she alleges was received for her benefit, but not paid over. This claim is combatted by the defendants who hold under a deed of bargain and sale from Madame von Roques and others, it is alleged.

from Madame von it is alleged. Some of the lands involved in the suit Some of the lands involved in the suit are said to have sold for only 21-2 cents an acre. The case has dragged itself through years, owing somewhat to the imprisonment of Mrs. Maybrick and the absence of Madame von Roques.
